Katherine Warner Ross is a trademark and complex commercial litigation attorney with more than twenty-five years of experience in the legal profession. She has handled all aspects of litigation for a wide range of commercial clients in both state and federal courts.

Mrs. Ross' clientele extends from Fortune 500 companies to solely-owned proprietorships, including major chemical and petrochemical corporations, transport and manufacturing conglomerates, leading companies in the food and beverage industry, a professional sports association, a fast food franchisor, various retailers and financial institutions, limited liability holding companies and trusts. She has litigated a variety of commercial disputes, including those centered around intellectual property, franchise, anti-trust, bankruptcy, lender liability, product liability, domain name disputes, software licensing, and contract and insurance claims. She has also counseled clients on a range of issues in the technology law field.

Prior to joining the ROSS IP GROUP, Katherine worked for large international law firms and an appellate boutique on make-or-break cases involving cutting edge technology and novel legal issues that helped shape product liability law and insurance industry standards. As the daughter of a small-town lawyer and a fifth-generation attorney, she grew up with an abiding respect for the law and its impact on every aspect of our lives.
