SCHOOL TEACHER FALSELY ACCUSED - CASE DROPPED

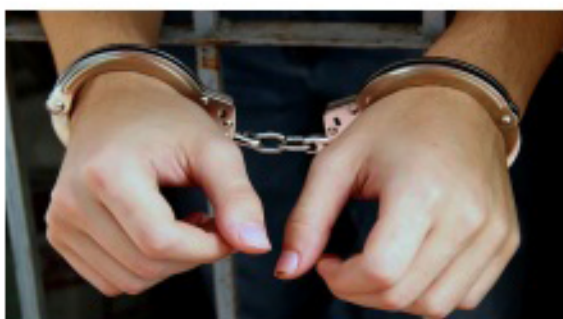

record was kept clean, and his reputation restored.

Our client, a school music teacher, was accused of inappropriate sexual contact by a student. Our law firm intervened with law enforcement and the prosecutor's office, presenting our defense evidence before an arrest took place which demonstrated the student had falsely reported the story. The case was rejected for filing and our client returned to the school to instruct. Early intervention - right after the police reached out to the client - was the key to a successful defense and justice being reached. The client's

FATHER AND SON FACING MURDER CHARGES HAVE CASE DISMISSED

Hoping to cash in on the marijuana boom, our clients travelled to California to invest. While attempting to transact a sale, father and son were robbed at gunpoint. In self-defense, one of our clients used a handgun to shoot the robber, whodied at scene. Our clients fled and retained Eisner Gorin while the police were searching for suspects. Our firm hired a former LAPD detective to investigate the claim of self-defense, and help us surrender the clients into custody. At that time, we also presented our defense position to the police including evidence in support of lawful use of force. We won the release of our clients within 48 hours after sitting in on the interrogations. At the end, the government became convinced that the evidence demonstrated our clients acted in self-defense, had no criminal history, while the decedent had just gotten out of prison for robbery and had a loaded firearm next to his body.

ATTORNEY FACING FELONY DUI WITH INJURY CHARGES AVOIDS PRISON

Our firm represented an attorney facing felony DUI charges who had caused an injury while driving under the influence and as a result was facing a significant time in prison. We worked closely with our client to develop mitigating evidence, including documenting his diligent work to address the underlying problems leading to the arrest. We developed an extensive record of psychological treatment related to post-traumatic stress (he had been a crime a victim in an unrelated incident), alcohol abuse treatment, paying restitution, and wearing a SCRAM alcohol-monitor on his ankle for over a year. This evidence demonstrated to the government a low risk for re-offending. At the end, we convinced the prosecutors that continued treatment and a probationary sentence was the just settlement in the case. The client has stayed out of prison custody on the case, and continues with alcohol and psychological treatment to stay fully sober. The firm's getting involved immediately after the arrest helped establish a successful strategy for court even before the arraignment.

TEENS ARRESTED FOR BURGLARY - NO FORMAL JUVENILE CHARGES

In juvenile cases, the emphasis is on rehabilitation rather than punishment. Unlike adult court, in which cases are adjudicated through the formal criminal process after the filing of criminal charges, juvenile cases provide another avenue for resolution before court: informal supervision through the probation department even after an arrest takes place. Recently our juvenile clients were arrested for multiple felonies - breaking into vehicles, theft, and being intoxicated. Our law firm's successful intervention with law enforcement and the probation department included providing character letters, grades, work history, and making full restitution to the car's owners. The intervention secured an informal resolution, allowing them access to rehabilitative services such as counseling while preventing formal criminal charges being filed against them in juvenile court. The minors' records will remain clean, thus improving the odds of getting into the best colleges and reaching their professional goals.
